We believe
EVERY child deserves the opportunity for their
BRIGHTEST FUTURE.
Dear Friends,

As I write this, construction is well underway for what will soon be Martha’s Table’s new home in Ward 8. On a recent visit to the site, I stood in a yet-unfinished classroom and I could just imagine how it will soon be filled with laughter, love, and learning. The Commons, which will be a beautiful 43,000 square foot facility, will house classrooms for hundreds of children, an industrial kitchen where volunteers and staff will prepare healthy meals, and will provide space for the community to come together. We’re co-locating with our friends at Community of Hope, who will provide health services a stone’s throw away, and we’ll be adjacent to affordable housing built by Horning Brothers.

We are rooting ourselves in this historic Ward 8 community so we can stand directly with families. At The Commons, we will offer a continuum of services, from healthy food access, to high-quality education programming for children, to supports specially designed for parents and caregivers. These resources will support families as they build a healthy foundation for life success. On the other side of town, we’re partnering with Jubilee Housing to maintain a presence in our Ward 1 home. Renovations will soon be complete at the historic Maycroft in Columbia Heights, where we will open pre-K classrooms for infants and toddlers. Our 37th year on 14th Street Northwest was spent preparing for the biggest change in our organization’s history. Many of you saw a preview of our future at our first annual Brighter Future Benefit, where we celebrated our work and community just steps away from our future home. Our move to Ward 8 is certainly audacious, but so is our goal of building a brighter future for every child in the District of Columbia.

What does a brighter future look like in the District of Columbia? We hope it is one where children grow into thriving adults, and families are supported with the resources they need to be successful. In this future, a child’s prospects and a family’s ability to access affordable, healthy food are not determined by their race, income, or location. But we have a lot of work to do, because in the present, the need is real and the need is great. Today in D.C.’s Ward 8, 50% of children are growing up in poverty, many struggling with access to high-quality education, healthy food, and support for their families. It is imperative that we do not let a child’s zip code predict his or her future success.

That’s why we spent this year building—physically—two new locations. Place matters, and we can only make a difference if we are a part of the neighborhoods where our families live and lead their children to success. We’re building our team of key partners, because we can’t do it alone. Corporate partners like the World Bank, who adopted a Joyful Food Market and supported the capital campaign to build the Commons, are helping to broaden the network of support for our families. Building authentic relationships with community members is essential too, which is why we’re grateful to have members of our Ward 8 Youth Advisory Council providing guidance on our programs. We’ve built out our data analysis capabilities, and are closely tracking the efforts to outcomes of our programs, finding that our Joyful Food Markets are significantly increasing shoppers’ food security and consumption of healthy food. Lastly, we’re increasing our understanding of each other, ourselves, and our communities by taking a hard look at racial equity. Our work will not succeed unless we address head-on the systemic barriers created by racism that have been present in our communities for generations.

In our 2016 Brighter Future report, you will learn about our network of supportive programs, which incorporate targeted interventions throughout the arc of a child’s development in order to achieve improved economic mobility and life outcomes. You will hear from some of our partners about why they’re allied with us in this journey. And you will find stories and recognition of our community of key supporters, with suggestions on how you can deepen your involvement.

I feel so lucky to count you as a supporter at this pivotal time in our organization’s history as we expand to two new locations and dramatically grow our programs. By the end of 2019, 5,000 more families East of the River will be able to access healthy foods through our Joyful Food Markets, an increase of 70%. By adding classrooms in our two new locations we are increasing enrollment in our high-quality education programming by 45%. Your impact is seen and felt every day—in our classrooms, on McKenna’s Wagon, at Martha’s Outfitters, at our Joyful Food Markets, and at the construction site in Ward 8. Thank you for all you do, and I hope you continue working with us for years to come.

Yours in service,

Patty Stonesifer
President & CEO
In the District of Columbia...

As the city continues to experience unprecedented population growth and prosperity, vast disparities based on geography, income, and race exist for children and their families.

The median family income for Ward 3 is $216,193 and has NINE full service grocery stores.

The median family income for Ward 8 is $24,096 and has ONLY ONE full service grocery store.

1 in 7 households and 1 in 3 households with children struggle with food insecurity in D.C.²

D.C. is the most expensive place in the United States for childcare. The annual cost for an infant and a 4 year-old is $40,473.

There is only room for 1/3 of infants and toddlers in childcare facilities.⁵

Fewer than 1/3 of D.C. public school students are considered “college and career ready” in math and English language arts.²
Our New Home
Moving Our Headquarters to Ward 8

In summer 2018, Martha’s Table’s headquarters will move to The Commons at Stanton Square. Through the collaborative efforts of the Horning Family Fund, Horning Brothers, and Community of Hope, we will open a newly-constructed, 43,000-square foot facility located in the Fort Stanton/Hillsdale area of D.C.’s Ward 8. The Commons will serve as our new headquarters and a hub for programs and community supports. Visit marthastable.org/expansion for more details on our exciting move!

Meet Our Partners
Horning Family Fund’s Joe and Lynne Horning

Our approach to building a brighter future is due in large part to the vision and generosity of Joe and Lynne Horning. As developers, Joe and his brother Larry spent decades building great places for families to live in D.C. Not satisfied with just building homes, Joe and Lynne’s Horning Family Fund has focused deeply on the community in Ward 8, providing supports for children and families. Their irreplaceable gift of acreage for The Commons site as well as a leadership gift for our capital campaign have paved the way for our future. For them, The Commons is about more than just a building:

“We wanted to do more than just build. We wanted to develop a vision. We did a feasibility study and found the area of greatest need. One of the missing pieces in Ward 8 was early childhood education.” -Lynne Horning

Meet Our Partners

Jubilee Housing

As an organization devoted to justice with deep community roots, Jubilee Housing is a perfect partner for our plans to continue standing with neighbors in Ward 1. Through our partnership, we will offer high-quality early childhood education programming at the historic Maycroft building in Columbia Heights. Walking distance from our longtime headquarters on 14th Street, the Maycroft will offer what Jubilee CEO Jim Knight calls “justice housing”—a combination of affordable housing within close reach of a resource-rich community in support of families. We share Jim’s high aspirations for the potential impact of our collaboration:

“Jubilee’s collaboration with Martha’s Table creating deeply affordable housing coupled with program opportunities at the Maycroft will enable scores of D.C. families to stabilize, develop, and thrive in a resource-rich neighborhood. Families will have easy access to educational, financial, and family life programming to support them from birth to college and beyond.”
How We are Building a Brighter Future

Number of Joyful Food Markets
(Private schools in Ward 7 and 8)

Before visiting a Joyful Food Market, food security for families was 24.5%. By 2016, that number increased to 74%.

Only 36.5% of families reported eating vegetables at least five days a week before visiting a Joyful Food Market; by May 2017 that number increased to 60%.

IN 2015 we had 16,000 volunteers saving Martha's Table over 91 million.

IN 2016 we had 18,026 volunteers saving Martha’s Table over 91.3 million.

Our Food Access Programs

We recognize that good nutrition is fundamental for children to build strong bodies and minds, and food deserts and food insecurity are highly prevalent East of the River—with just three grocery stores serving 160,000 residents. In 2015, we partnered with the Capital Area Food Bank to pilot Joyful Food Markets. Today, we have scaled sustainably to 39 elementary schools East of the River, offering monthly no-cost, pop-up markets to more than 6,000 children and families monthly. As the bell rings for the end of the school day, children and parents shop for beautiful foods and chop, taste, and swap recipes with our chef educators. At these Markets, we distribute more than one million healthy meals annually in an atmosphere that reinforces that food is joyful and good health is supported by tasty cooking. We also maintain community-wide access to healthy fresh produce monthly at our Community Markets and Martha’s Markets. Visit marthastable.org/programs/healthy-eating for more.

We are grateful for our market partners who make our work possible:

Adopt-a-Market partners assist with the distribution of healthy groceries and co-lead healthy eating activities with children and families at our Joyful Food Markets. The groups, ranging from students at local universities and high schools to lawyers, form lasting bonds with neighbors across the District while tackling food insecurity at elementary schools East of the River. In 2016, 24 different local organizations adopted our markets, joining our community of over 18,000 volunteers.

With our goal to be in every elementary school East of the River by the end of 2018, it’s more important than ever to volunteer. To become an Adopt-a-Market partner this school year email: volunteer@marthastable.org
Meet Our Partners

Adopt-a-Market Partner: Eastern High School Key Club

Sarah Fitzpatrick is a Special Education Teacher at Eastern High School in Washington, DC. In her position, she sponsors the Key Club, a community-based volunteer group run by Eastern students. This year, the Key Club adopted the Joyful Food Market at Aiton Elementary School. Here’s what Sarah had to say about their experience:

“The greatest part was watching my students not only take on a little bit of leadership while learning about their vegetables, but especially watching them interact with the elementary school children shopping at the market. I saw my students light up when they took on that responsibility. When the market ended and we finished cleaning up, they were begging to know when we’d be back to help again.”

Adopt-a-Market Partner: Sibley Memorial Hospital

Health is a community issue, and no one knows this better than our partners at Sibley Memorial Hospital. This past year, Sibley employees adopted the Joyful Food Market at KIPP DC Heights Academy as part of their community health strategy, fostering engagement with neighbors and creating a presence for hospital employees throughout the city. Courtney Coffey, Community Health Program Manager at Sibley and Joyful Food Market volunteer, reflected on the program’s importance:

“From a community health perspective, Joyful Food Markets are vital because they support the health and development of children, who will soon become the District’s next generation of adults and community leaders. Our partnership with the program is a well-loved tradition at Sibley and it sits at the core of our volunteerism efforts.”

Corporative Partner: World Bank Group

Lindsey Buss, Senior Officer for Community Outreach at the World Bank Group, is no stranger to Martha’s Table. After serving as Martha’s Table’s CEO for several years, he continues to promote our work in his current position. This had led to an important partnership—many of the World Bank Group’s staff and departments volunteer at Martha’s Table, and the Operations Policy and Country Services team adopted the Joyful Food Market at Houston Elementary School this past year. Here’s what Lindsey had to say about why our organizations work together so well:

“Although we’re a global institution, Washington, D.C. is our host city and we feel that it’s important to be active locally as well. Promoting early childhood development, nutrition, and family health are all part of the World Bank’s mission to end poverty worldwide, so it’s not surprising that our institution, and also our staff, find a connection with the work that Martha’s Table is doing locally.”

At the benefit, we introduced our first-ever Luminary Award winner, Andy Shallal, founder of Busboys and Poets. Meet Our Partners

Community Partner: Our Lady of Perpetual Help Church

Our Lady of Perpetual Help Church has been an invaluable partner as we engage and work to build lasting relationships in our new neighborhood. Located just around the corner from The Commons, Our Lady of Perpetual Help is a neighbor that has welcomed us with open arms. The Church hosted our 2016 Harvest Dinner, an annual community Thanksgiving gathering with food, music, and fellowship, making our first dinner in our new neighborhood a success! This past spring, the Church opened its doors again, hosting our first annual Brighter Future Benefit on its sprawling lawn with breathtaking views of Washington, D.C., where their dance troop, The Panorama Jammers, led our guests in line dances as the sun set on that beautiful evening. We are honored and grateful to partner with this pillar of the community at a pivotal time in our organization’s history.

Ninth Annual Sips & Suppers

Sips & Suppers is a major celebration of food and community that provides vital support to Martha’s Table and DC Central Kitchen. It raises awareness of homelessness and hunger in our nation’s capital and promotes efforts to develop sustainable and local solutions to these challenges. The 2017 event was held on January 28th and 29th, and raised over $650,000 to fight hunger. Please save the date for our 10th annual Sips & Suppers on January 27th and 28th, 2018.
